ENDING VIOLENCE AGAINST CHILDREN

Developing a Roadmap to a Healthy Childhood and Adolescence

This conference will provide a forum to advance the conversation about what we as clinicians, policy makers, funders, advocates, and a society can—and should—do to ensure children grow up free from abuse and neglect. Our goal is to build a movement to end violence against children.

Our speakers, panelists, and moderators are leading world experts in their fields. They include researchers on the physical, economic and societal effects of violence against children, policy makers representing U.S. and international governmental and non-governmental agencies and organizations, funding organizations, and advocacy organizations.

The conference is designed for social workers, child welfare and advocacy professionals, physicians, nurses, mental health and other medical professionals, attorneys, law enforcement, and educators, policy makers, donors, and private sector leaders. Community members are also welcome to attend.
